

Support for the Women's Bill of Rights

What they're saying

“WoLF applauds the introduction of this Women’s Bill of Rights, an historic and profound resolution that will advance and protect the rights of women in the United States. For too long, women have been told that there is no word to describe us and our experiences. We have seen the definition of “woman” be distorted to promote offensive and harmful sexist stereotypes. This resolution is a clear signal that our voices can no longer be silenced in this way. WoLF was proud to co-author the model Women’s Bill of Rights that inspired this resolution, and we are grateful for the courageous leadership shown by Rep. Lesko and Sen Hyde-Smith, along with their co-leads. The simple, common-sense provisions of this resolution will help ensure that the government does not endorse the falsehood of human sex change, and that spaces and resources for women remain that way.” – Lauren Adams, Legal Director, Women’s Liberation Front

“Americans are currently facing an onslaught from the woke Left to diminish womanhood. Whether it be by attacking girls’ sports, reducing woman to ‘birthing people,’ putting woman at risk in jails and bathrooms, or nominating a Supreme Court justice who cannot define what a woman is, conservatives need to fight back. We at the Conservative Political Action Coalition (CPAC) want to thank the Republican Study Committee, Rep. Lesko and Sen. Hyde-Smith for attempting to restore sanity by bringing forward the Women’s Bill of Rights resolution.” – Matt Schlapp, Chairman, Conservative Political Action Coalition (CPAC)

“Men and women are different. This is both a self-evident truth and a scientific fact acknowledged by the vast majority of Americans. Yet, for some here in Washington (mostly on the left), manhood and womanhood are simply labels that can be changed at will. These radicals cannot define what a ‘woman’ is, even as they claim to advocate for women’s rights. It would be comedic if the consequences weren’t so serious. In response to this dangerous ideology, it is imperative that we make clear in law what should be apparent to any sane person: that ‘man’ and ‘woman’ are biologically grounded realities, not mere social constructs. Only by doing so will we ensure the rights of each are fully respected and affirmed. APP is grateful for the leadership of Rep. Lesko, Sen. Hyde-Smith, and all the Republican members supporting this resolution, and we urge the GOP to make this effort a priority both now and especially should they retake the majority in Congress next year.” – Terry Schilling, President, American Principles Project

“The U.S. chapter of Women’s Declaration International, a nonpartisan global organization that support women’s sex-based rights around the world, is proud to support the Women’s Bill of Rights, which would enshrine into law many of the principles outlined in the global Declaration on Women’s Sex-Based Rights, which we work to advance throughout U.S. law.” – Kara Dansky, President, WDI USA

“Women and girls’ interests are being short-changed today by those who seek to eradicate sex-specific sports, facilities and opportunities. That ends today. I’m grateful that Representatives Lesko, Banks, Harshbarger, and Miller are standing up for women and for common sense.” – Independent Women’s Voice Vice President Carrie Lukas

“We can’t fight sex discrimination if we can’t agree on what it means to be a woman. And we can’t collect accurate data regarding public health, medicine, education, crime, and the economic status of women if we redefine sex to mean ‘gender identity.’ At Independent Women’s Law Center, we know what a woman is. Thankfully, Representatives Lesko, Banks, Harshbarger, and Miller do too.” – Independent Women’s Law Center Director Jennifer C. Braceras

“It is shocking that women today are being told that our unique status is irrelevant and being a woman has no relationship to being female. Our protections are being stripped away by radical policies confusing biological fact with gender feelings, and activist judges who can’t define a Woman. Concerned Women for America LAC applauds the Women’s Bill of Rights resolution that will recognize and protect the intrinsic dignity of women and our unique status under the law.” – Penny Young Nance, CEO and President, Concerned Women for America Legislative Action Committee

“The woke Left is on a mission to roll back generations of progress made in the name of womens’ rights. Their refusal to acknowledge the biological differences between men and women is unconscionable and, in many cases, dangerous. If left unchecked, the Left’s assault on what it means to be a woman will continue to be a detriment to all biological women and will see opportunities and resources redirected to individuals who were never meant to receive them. Fortunately, Congresswomen Lesko, Miller, and Harsbarger, alongside RSC Chairman Jim Banks, are leading the effort to reaffirm what it means to be a woman and the dangers of the Left’s current trajectory.” – Jessica Anderson, Executive Director of Heritage Action

“Americans will not stay silent against an ideology that erases women. To clear any confusion over the definition of a woman, this bicameral effort simply reaffirms the truth: women are distinct from men and deserve equal protection under law. We urge every member of Congress to protect the civil rights of women and pass the Women’s Bill of Rights Resolution now.” – Autumn Leva, Senior Vice President of Family Policy Alliance

“The woke Left’s efforts to erase women stops today with the indelible ink of the Women’s Bill of Rights. When it comes to sex and gender it’s time to trust the science. Women are women and men are men. We must acknowledge our physiological differences as we celebrate our shared humanity. This Resolution protects women in prisons and restrooms, ensures the spirit of Title IX is maintained in college sports, and restores common sense to how we refer to pregnant and nursing women.” – Kris Ullman, President, Eagle Forum
